This course counts as a course-based undergraduate research experience (CURE) = gain valuable research skills!

Spring 2024
In person Tues. 9:30-10:45 am, the rest online!

This course is designed to offer tools for understanding religious and cultural diversity within healthcare settings, which includes consideration of religious patients, religious healthcare workers, faith-based healthcare institutions, and the impact of religious communities on healthcare laws and services. To develop skills for navigating intercultural differences, students will practice applying academic approaches to religion to health-related case studies.
